Beef Prices Increased as Policy Fixed

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board tonight announced a report from the committee on the wholesale price of beef and butchery cuts, which also will increase correspondingly.

A board statement said the revision involves an increase of $1.50 per hundredweight for the whole sale carcass price for the autumn period, ending Nov. 30. The basic Toronto maximum price will therefore be $17.25 per hundredweight, with the usual differentials for the other 14 zones across Canada.

STRICT CONTROL
The statement said the higher wholesale price will mean "more responding increases in retail prices which will, however, be more strictly controlled." It added: "The wholesale price level will advance seasonally until June, at which point it will be 25 cents per hundredweight above the ceiling price announced last June. In addition, a special premium of 50 cents per hundredweight will be allowed on beef qualifying for the domestic government 'red brand' and named discounts have been set for grades inferior to good commercial beef."

The lengthy statement from the board said there had been representations in regard to shortages in the domestic beef supply.

Brother of Czech Envoy to Canada Shot in Prague

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—(CP)—The Czechoslovak consulate here received word yesterday that Vladimír Peřínka, brother of the Czechoslovak minister to Canada, had been shot in Prague by order of the Nazi occupation authorities. He was an official in the Czechoslovak foreign office prior to the German occupation.

Loan Quota

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—(CP)—Board of Control was informed yesterday that Toronto's quota of the coming $250,000,000 Victory Loan will be $200,000,000. The loan will open Oct. 10.

Conservatives Need New Plan Member States

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(CP)—Reuters published a report from Stockholm today that Nazi police have arrested 70 persons, mostly young men, in the Norwegian port of Oslo, in another move aimed at crushing mounting outbursts against the German occupation.

By JOHN A. PARRIS
LONDON, Oct. 8.—(RUP)—German troops and Gestapo agents have started a systematic search of Norwegian homes for arms as the result of big-scale patriot disturbances at Oslo, Trondheim and Narvik, Norwegian sources reported today.

It was indicated that the Germans might soon have to declare martial law in Norway as a result of emergency imposed on the Trondheim area, where 15 more hostages had been slaughtered by Gestapo firing squads in the flooded city of Trondheim. The search for arms was reported to be continuing throughout the country, to bring a two day toll to 25.

Advices reaching London said that German soldiers reported that German soldiers and civilians had clashed in the northern sector of the Trondheim area and at least two Nazis and 12 or more civilians had been wounded.

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE
The 1942 German campaign in Russia appears to be reaching its climax at Stalingrad where the Don-Volga area northwest of there.

The issue is in the balance, but the campaign ends in costly failure. The entire course of the war is affected and the might be the beginning of the end for Hitler.

U.S. Army Seeks 18, 19-Year-Olds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. James A. Ulloa, adjutant general of the United States army, said today the army "wants all men" for immediate training every year of age from 18 and 19 years of age.

Maj. Ulloa said young men of this age have the superior physical stamina necessary to win this war. "In raising our army," he said, "we're depending mainly on the development of a truly democratic army which is developing a service system which is developing a truly democratic army."

He said the young Americans 18 and 19 years of age are the best ignored, represent prime recruits who can relieve the strain of inducing men with dependents and skilled workers in our war factories who are necessary here at home."

45th Day of Siege

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Red army tank forces breaking into the fortified German left flank northwest of Stalingrad were reported today to have forced the enemy to divert veteran Prussian units, the elite of his army, from other fronts in an effort to stop the push aimed at relieving the siege of the Volga city.

The Russians, however, maintained the initiative on the steps even as the Germans poured more and more men and machines into the holocaust. The German attacks were beaten off both to the northwest as well as inside the ruined city.

During the past three days, dispatches said, the Germans lost thousands of men, hundreds of trucks and armored cars, and scores of tanks and heavy weapons. The German attacks were beaten off both to the northwest as well as inside the ruined city.

Yugoslav Puppet President Resigns

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Field Marshal Milan Nedelko, president of the puppet government of Yugoslavia, has resigned, according to a Budapest dispatch today.

C.B.S. heard a B.B.C. broadcast linking Nedelko's action to a crisis in the Balkans, marked also by the recent announcement that defense minister of the puppet Croatia government, Marshal Jozef Kvalter, had gone on prolonged sick leave and that the chief of the Croat general staff had been retired at his own request. B.B.C. said Nedelko's resignation had not been accepted.

"Of Brightness Gone"

By Holly Watterson

CHAPTER XVII
AT Good Samaritan you said Frasier-and-Bech as naturally as at table you said call-and-voys, broad-and-butter, he said, Frasier-and-Bech as in pediatrics, or GYN, or Surgery, as they progressed through the months of their rotating services.

That doctor-nurse combination had begun three years before, back in inter-probationary days, more or less by accident and had continued by design—Dr. Frasier's design—straight on into Emergency. Dr. Frasier's last service before he would go into private practice.

For the first time in months Candace found herself resented it. In the beginning, longing to run away from anything or anybody that even remotely suggested Martin, but circumstances and Peter's quiet will had been too much for her.

She would have said that she had completely forgotten Martin. That he was to her now simply a doctor who had once been an intern at the hospital and was now a consulting staff member who appeared occasionally on important cases. That would be true again after tomorrow, but today he was more than that, much more. He was the man she had once loved, and who was to marry on the next day or other girl.

She had come on evening duty a few minutes before, to find Emergency busy in the aftermath of a street fight in a nearby foreign neighborhood. Being shepherded up to a ward under the watchful eye of a policeman was a sullen group sporting assorted bandaged knive wounds and blackened eyes, while on the table, winning under Peter's probing fingers, was still another late belligerent.

Jepperson, the nurse she was relieving, was a good one as far as care and kindness went, but not particularly quick or efficient. Candace thought, Jeppery! he'll be all right at this mess if I don't clear it, and she set quickly to work to rid the corner behind the screen of the stained awbs and gauze, leaving to Jepperson the less delicate task of passing instruments to Peter.

She was still cleaning back there, out of sight, when she heard two of the internes on ambulance duty—riding the bus, as it was called—come into Emergency, arguing cheerfully. She recognized them from their voices as Henderson, the rather flip book-looking one, and Fat Quincey.

"It's three days since that baby was born in your bus," Quincey was saying. "Three days, and you haven't come across with that barrel of pork for yet. The rest of us are dying of dry-rot waiting."

That prospect didn't seem to dismay Henderson. "You know, I kinda wish you would," he said cheerfully. "You'd force me into duty to look over $5 for out for a bar when you can get stinko tomorrow at the Harbort-Corby." Papa Harbort's expense, Papa Harbort's home, they say, is providing even champagne.

Candace had stiffened. Shut up, she thought, why shut up? But Quincey's mind had already gone on to other things.

"What are you doing here?" he asked Jepperson. "Where's Hip? That Bech? He's supposed to be on." But that I don't profess," he added lightly. "Bech always makes me feel nine years old, unwashed, and late for school."

With the change of subject, Candace could breathe again. She emerged from behind the screen, rather pale but apparently otherwise untroubled.

"Good evening," she said with vinegary sweetness. "I see our dear little cherub cheeks are with us again."

Jepperson giggled nervously, and the two boys murmured confused apologies and slunk about from the room.

Peter straightened a moment from the sound he was drawing. "You're busted, Jep," he said calmly. "Go on, Bech will take over. When she had gone and Candace stood beside him he grinned at her, his mouth open in a grin that said what would happen if one of the young squirts around here got up enough courage to dare say 'how do you do'?" he remarked.

Candace stared frostily, raised
